THE Governor General of the Philippines, D. Eulogio Despujol, Count de Caspe, accompanied by the Countess de Caspe, left Manils on the morning of the 7th idstant, on board the Ntra. The Count de Caspe, who had scarcely been in Manila fifteen months, is highly preised by the press and the public for his many acts of, benevolence, both officially and in private life. One of the good things he did during his short term of office was his inauguration of the School of Arts, which has done a great deal to encourage native industry in the several provinces. Rutherford Birchard Hayes, LL.D., was the nineteenth President of the United States. He was born at Doleware, Ohio, October 14, 1822. Graduating at Kenyon College in 1842, he was admitted to the Bar three years later. During the Civil war he saw a good deal of service, and when he resigned his commission in 1865, he held the position of Major-General of Volunteers. He entered Congress the same year as a Representative from Ohio, and two years later became Governor of that State, was re-elected in 1869, and again in 1875. How Mr George Grossmith became an operatio performer is related by that gentleman himself in the pages of 'The THE delivery of the English Mail was be-Icler.' It was one Tuesday night in the year 1877 that he received a letter from Sir Arthur (then Mr Sullivan), dated from the Grossmith, -Are you inclined to go on the stage for a time! There is a part in the now piece I am doing with Gilbert which you would play admirably.' The piece was The Sorcerer'-the part John Wellington Wells. Subsequently Mr Grossmith learnt that Mr Sullivan and Mr Arthur Cocil were both writing letters at the club when the former happened to remark that he couldn't 'find a fellow for this opera.' Mr Cecil said, I wonder if Grossmith. Bofore he had finished the centence. Sullivan, who had heard Mr Grossmith give a musical skotch at a dinner party, exclaimed The very man! And so (says the narrator of this anecdote) I was engaged.' Mr Grossmith, it will be found, has many amusing things to tell his interviewer about experiences on tour. That' Sports at the Racecourse on Saturday, 25th (he says) is hard work if you like. I have gone a four months' tour without missing a night. It takes it out of one terribly. THERE were six battleships in Malta harbour recently but not one of them was in a condition to put to sea. A correspondent of the Central News writes :- When the news of the carthonake in Zonto reached here the battleship Dreadnought was ordered to take in medical appliances and an additional surgeon, bell tents, provisions, and timber, and to proceed to the distressed island with all possible speed. It was found, however, that her machinery was under repair and that she could not procond to sea at short notice. Considerable commont has been caused here by the fact that of the six battleshins in harbour at the time not one was in a position to proceed to sea at a few hours' notice.

He in. tends, it is said, to avail himself of the invitation courteously extended by Mr Balfour to resume his privilege as an ex-Minister. This is the first time he has sat shoulder That since the failure to obtain the sorting to shoulder with his old colleagues since he laid down the leadership. The accident may have considerable influence on the course of events in the session. Lord R. Churchill chanced to find himself next to Mr Goschen, and judging from the friendly way in which they conversed the hatchet has been buried.

THE members of the Reporters' Gallery of the House of Commons were somewhat astonished on the 6th alt. by the appearance in their midst of Mr J. J. O'Kelly, the Pernellite who failed to get returned tor North Roscommon at the General Election. Mr O'Kelly represents the Daily Independent, the organ of the Parnellites. There have been many metances of reporters leaving the Gallery for the floor of the House-Sir Charles Russell, Mr Justin McCarthy, Mr T. P. O'Connor, and Sir Edward Clarke, to mention a few-but Mr O'Kelly is the only instance of a journalist migrating from the floor to the Gallery.

THE interesting question as to whether a Colonial Governor possesses the power to release a prisoner incarcerated by order of the Supreme Court of the Colony for alleged contempt has been settled in the affirmative by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council. The special case. which related to the Bahamas, was referred to this tribunal for consideration by the Secretary of State. The editor of a local paper refused to give up the name or the MS. of a correspondent who criticised the Chief Justice, not judicially, but in reply to some remarks by the Chief Justice in the same local paper. For this act the editor was committed for contempt, but released by the Governor under express instructions from the Secretary of State. The points which the Judicial Committee had to consider were, firstly, whether the editor had committed contempt of Court at all; secondly, whether, if he had committed that offence, the sentences passed upon him were legal; and, thirdly, whother the Governor had the right to order his release. The first was answered in the negative, and the two others in the affirmative. Thus it appears that the power of the Governor of a Crown Colony does extend to releasing a prisoner committed for contempt.

'I dislike particularly,' the testator states in his will, 'the exclusiveness of family pride, and I wish not to be buried in the family vault in Blenheim Chapel, but in any suitable place that may be convenient in which others of my own generation and surroundings are equally able with myself to find a resting place together.' The Duke bequeaths to each domestic servent and to each elerk in the estate That I see the worthy Attorney General office and to his_head gardener and clerk of the works (if of five years' service) £100, and to those of ten years' service further £50 each. He bequeaths to the executors £5,000 to invest the same and accumulate the income for twenty-one years, and then to apply the trust-fund in repairing, renovating, and improving the roof and outside of Blenheim Palace. All the residue of the real and personal estate to which at his death he might be boneficially entitled, or over which he might have power of disposition beneficially, the testator devised and bequeathed absolutely to his wife, Jane Lilian Warren Spencer Churchill, Duchess of Mariborough, daughter of the late Commodore Price, U.S. Navy, and widow of Mr Louis Hammersley. The will suggests, but without making it obligatory, that the Duchess may see fit to lay out £3,000 in restoring Bladon Church.

THE LONDON LYRIC COMPANY. Mesars Brett Hardy and Saville Smith's London Lyric Company arrived by the English mail steamer Malwa to-day. For the inauguration of their short season here. which commences on Monday evening, Amy Steinberg's farcical comedy 'My Uncle' has been chosen. Originally produced at Terry's Theatre, 'My Uncle' soon became a favourité not only in London but in the provinces and abroad. The plot runs somewhat as follows :-- A young English gentleman, Mr Felix Flutter, writes to his nucle in India, Mr Benjamin Brown, that he has got married and encloses a photo of the lady to whom he is engaged. This brings a remittance of £500, a welcome addition to the resources of his impecunious nephew. However, the result of the engagement is a breach of promise action on the part of the lady, which abgorbi a large portion of the £500. Flutter next announces to his confiding relative the birth of a daughter and this duly brings another remittance. Next year the arrival of a son to bless the Flutter household is the news by which the uncle's heart is sought to be moved, but the old gen. tleman about this time suddenly turns up in England and thereby complicates matters a good deal. Flutter decided to keep up the assumed role of husband and father as all hazzrds, and the ingenious but dangerous devices to which he has to resort in order to do this lead to a number of highly amusing situations. The second production will be Pinero's amusing and well-written comedy 'The Magistrate,'
